I understand that the Graduate School guidelines pertaining to all final Master's exams will apply. That is, any candidate who fails in the final examination may (1) upon recommendation of the advisor and approval of the graduate dean, be granted a second examination (with an option of oral or written), after a lapse of at least one semester (or 16 weeks), or (2) be excluded from further candidacy for the degree. Failure in the second examination disqualifies the candidate from obtaining the degree.
